Entrepreneurship

Course Description

This course is to explore many dimensions of new venture creation and growth and to foster innovation and new business formations in independent and corporate settings.

The course will be concerned with content and process questions as well as with formulation and implementation issues that relate to conceptualizing, developing and managing successful new ventures.

In this course, a new venture is defined as a start-up business with a high growth potential that distinguishes itself from existing companies through innovation - for example, through an innovative product or service, an innovative production process, a new business model, or a new market.

A cornerstone of the course is to nurture the capability to develop a detailed business plan examining the financial, marketing, human resource, operational and strategic dimensions of starting a potential new business.

Course LEARNING OUTCOMES

To understand fundamental concepts of entrepreneurship, including tech startups, tech innovation, and business models in the context of the computer science industry

To apply the entrepreneurial framework of multidisciplinary functional teams and methodologies (e.g., Lean Startup, Business Model Canvas; Porter five forces) to validate tech-based business ideas."

To Analyse emerging technologies (e.g., AI, cloud computing, LLM) and assess their potential for business opportunities, disruption, and commercialization

Develop a functional prototype or software-based solution, with value proposition

To demonstrate an entrepreneurial mindset by embracing uncertainty, resilience, and ethical decision-making in technology-based ventures.

Rabbit and tortoise story

Slow and steady wins the race

Fast and consistent will always beat the slow and study

Firstly, identify your core competency and then change the playing field that suits your core competency.

Teamwork

Other lessons from the overall story

Pool resources and work with a team. The sum of the whole is greater than the sum of the parts.

We learn more from failures than successes.

Compete against the situation - not against a rival.

Situational leadership is an effective way to leverage on one another's strengths.

Business vs Entrepreneurship

Terms “business” and “entrepreneurship”

- The terms “business” and “entrepreneurship” are often used interchangeably, but they are distinct concepts that have significant differences.

Think about
Entrepreneurship!

What is Entrepreneurship?

Academic Definition (Stevenson & Jarillo)

- Entrepreneurship is the process by which individuals pursue opportunities without regard to resources they currently control.

Venture Capitalist (Fred Wilson)

- Entrepreneurship is the art of turning an idea into a business.

Explanation of What Entrepreneurs Do

- Entrepreneurs assemble and then integrate all the resources needed—the money, the people, the business model, the strategy—needed to transform an invention or an idea into a viable business.

Why Become an Entrepreneur?

Three common reasons

Desire to be their own boss

Desire to pursue their own ideas

Financial rewards

Characteristics of Successful Entrepreneurs

Common Myths About Entrepreneurs

Myth 1: Entrepreneurs Are Born Not Made

This myth is based on the mistaken belief that some people are genetically predisposed to be entrepreneurs.

The consensus of many studies is that no one is “born” to be an entrepreneur; everyone has the potential to become one.

Whether someone does or doesn't become an entrepreneur, is a function of the environment, life experiences, and personal choices.

Characteristics of successful entrepreneurs

- Achievement motivated
- Alert to opportunities
- Creative
- Decisive
- Energetic
- Has a strong work ethic
- Is a moderate risk taker
- Is a networker
- Lengthy attention span
- Optimistic disposition
- Persuasive
- Promoter
- Resource assembler
- Self-confident
- Self-starter
- Tenacious
- Tolerant of ambiguity
- Visionary

Myth 2: Entrepreneurs Are Gamblers

Most entrepreneurs are moderate risk takers.

The idea that entrepreneurs are gamblers originates from two sources:

- Entrepreneurs typically have jobs that are less structured, and so they face a more uncertain set of possibilities than people in traditional jobs.
- Many entrepreneurs have a strong need to achieve and set challenging goals, a behavior that is often equated with risk taking.

Myth 3: Entrepreneurs Are Motivated Primarily by Money.

While it is naive to think that entrepreneurs don't seek financial rewards, money is rarely the reason entrepreneurs start new firms.

In fact, some entrepreneurs warn that the pursuit of money can be distracting.

Myth 3: Entrepreneurs Are Motivated Primarily by Money.

While it is naive to think that entrepreneurs don't seek financial rewards, money is rarely the reason entrepreneurs start new firms.

In fact, some entrepreneurs warn that the pursuit of money can be distracting.

Myth 4: Entrepreneurs Should Be Young and Energetic.

The most active age for business ownership is 35 to 45 years old.

While it is important to be energetic, investors often cite the strength of the entrepreneur as their most important criteria in making investment decisions.

- What makes an entrepreneur “strong” in the eyes of an investor is experience, maturity, a solid reputation, and a track record of success.
- These criteria favor older rather than younger entrepreneurs

Myth 4: Entrepreneurs Love the Spotlight

While some entrepreneurs are flamboyant, the vast majority of them do not attract public attention.

As evidence of this, consider the following question: “How many entrepreneurs could you name?”

- Most of us could come up with Jeff Bezos of Amazon.com, Mark Zuckerberg of Facebook, Larry Page and Sergey Brin of Google or maybe Elon Musk of Tesla and SpaceX.
- But few could name the founders of Netflix, YouTube, or DIRECTV, even though we frequently use those firms' services.

Types of Entrepreneurial Start-ups

Salary-Substitute Firms

Firms that basically provide their owner or owners a similar level of income to what they would be able to earn in a conventional job

Lifestyle Firms

Firms that provide their owner or owners the opportunity to pursue a particular lifestyle, and make a living at it

Entrepreneurial Firms

Firms that bring new products and services to the market by creating and seizing opportunities regardless of the resources they currently control

The Entrepreneurial Process

The Entrepreneurial Process Consists of Four Steps

Step 1: Deciding to become an entrepreneur.

Step 2: Developing successful business ideas.

Step 3: Moving from an idea to an entrepreneurial firm.

Step 4: Managing and growing the entrepreneurial firm.
